Details: Born in 1969 on cker islands outside Gothenburg in the west coast of Sweden. My family has lived here for generations. Here is proximity to open sea and a stunning nature. Started playing piano by the age of 10 and never really liked it. It was all about classical guitar. Entering music college with a focus on guitar and a promising future. (back then:-) The piano was never considered, not the slightest, as the main tool for expression. Even today - after over 20 years of regular concerts with different constellations - I have not defined my approach to this versatile instrument. To be able to understand "the piano role" I have started to improvise a lot more. I have always liked the sunrise, the freshness of an early morning. That has also become my time and very often I sit down and play my piano. I push record and play until the inspiration is out. The choice of keeping a recording is depended on how it makes me feel. Solo Piano Diary is about my feelings, mood and my hunger for expression. Playing in a diary form is a quest for honesty, where suddenly the tone that was insipid yesterday is inspired today. The piano diary has become a way for me to verify my soul and to whittle truth out of my heart. The melodies are therefore a profound mix of pain and of peace. I hope that my musical diary is a bearer of (e)motion which helps you as a listener to flow in the right direction //Christian Lindquist
