Life, death, oceans, comets, and the universe serve as the inspiration for this folk/rock album, making you believe that Julia Massey truly wants to scoop you up and hold you forever. 12 MP3 Songs FOLK: Folk-Rock, FOLK: Progressive Folk Details: I feel uncomfortable talking about myself from the third person because I think that one person talking about me is plenty. Growing up in Catonsville, MD with a younger sister and educators for parents, I happily took piano lessons for 8 years, developing my love for music. After my family went through the death of my father, I stopped taking formal lessons, but started to develop ideas about spirituality that would eventually influence my own music. Traveling to Boulder, Colorado for my collegial years helped me to solidify a love for the mountains as well as a starting point for writing my first album, Brains in Bubbles. By the end of my 4 years, however, I got the itch to move back East with some very close friends, hence my last two years teaching in Bedford-Stuyvesant, a neighborhood in Brooklyn. This is where I spent the most challenging years of my life, thus far. Its also where I recorded the album Moons Stars Convene with Craig Levy as a kind of tribute to all of the amazing people and places I have encountered. I have been lucky enough to travel to Africa, where I climbed Kilimanjaro, and India, where I discovered the birth of Eastern philosophies. I have been luckiest, though, in always being surrounded by people who have supported me and loved me in every way. Now that Ive finished with a tour in a grease-powered RV with my roommates in New York (thebreakfreeproject.org), Ive landed in Steamboat Springs, Colorado, where Ill be for the time being.
