If you enjoy dark, acoustic music, you can click here to download (for free) every track from my solo debut album, "Midnight Snow". The artist is an American who has left Seattle and is now living and creating in Eastern Europe. "Midnight Snow" is a deeply personal concept album. The first 5 songs (which can be thought of as Side A) are "Midnight Snow", while the last 5 songs (Side B) are to be thought of as "Morning Rain". Side A, "Midnight Snow": Track 1, Strangled Into Gray, is an anthem about the struggles of everyday life. The frustrations expressed in Strangled Into Gray provide the spark for everything that is to follow. Every note on this album was intended as a response to this daily struggle. The next 4 tracks take us to those candle-lit evenings full of intimacy, inspiration, bliss and beauty. How intense and magnificent life can be under the right influences! But what is the meaning of these moments in relation to the struggles and mundaneness of yet another tomorrow in the world as it actually exists? Side B, "Morning Rain": After the candle is blown out at the end of Track 5, the beauty symbolized by a midnight snowflake is replaced with the grayness of a rainy morning. The difference between the lightness of snow and the heaviness of rain is only a few degrees in temperature. The idea of this small change in temperature is meant to symbolize our small changes in perception. "Morning Rain" reminds us that "Midnight Snow" is not and cannot be a permanent state; that, symbolically, the next morning will come and we will have to deal with its unpleasant and harsh realities. Track 10, "Sentiment", closes the album with the idea that perhaps what matters is not life's peaks or valleys, but the contentedness of a life well-lived with that one special person who is worthy of spending one's entire life with. People who are interested in Leonard Cohen Rufus Wainwright Damien Rice should consider this download.
