Even more clubs soon began requesting him because of his clever observations, unique storytelling style, and ability to improvise with his audience. After winning $200 in a local comedy competition, Jeremy left the rural, Southern Illinois life behind to explore the comedy scene in Chicago. Once he made it to Chicago, it was at The Second City that he first experimented with the front porch style comedy that is now a staple of his act. His work soon earned him a spot as a regular performer at the critically acclaimed iO Comedy Theater in Chicago as well as roles in both film and television. He has since returned to his rural hometown to help his parents manage their trailer park. His show now focuses on his observations of rural life, stories about his family, and a hilarious closing song on his guitar. This one of a kind act is a must see!
