Her primary repertoire was made up of songs she had written. During this time Lynn auditioned at MGM Records in Los Angeles, and Columbia Records in New York. The 1970s marked the beginning of ten years of touring on the road working as a single act and in groups performing folk, country, rock, disco, and chart songs of the day. But writing and performing original music was always Lynn's first love. Her professional career in music, after years of performing across the country from San Francisco to Las Vegas to Florida and places in between shifted in the 1980s. It was then that Lynn began volunteer work with the Los Angeles Aids Hospice Committee and a more meaningful way to share her music emerged. The songs in this collection represent the music Lynn created during her professional career, as well as her years in the hospice environment. She continues to write and perform her music in the Jacksonville, Florida area.
