Dwayne has dual nationality and regards that distinction as his most valuable. At the age of five, he began piano lessons, and has been a professional musician since the age of 16. Dwayne Ford is a talented and accomplished composer and musician who has written, performed and recorded with some of the music industry's biggest names including David Foster, the band TOTO, Donovan, and countless producers and musicians. Dwayne has won awards from The American Song festival, The Tokyo Music Festival, and six awards from the SOCAN. A founding member of the band Atkinson, Danko and Ford (which would become Bearfoot), Dwayne recorded five albums for CBS, producing the last one himself. (it is now a collectors item thanks to the names appearing on the album). Bearfoot was nominated for a JUNO award, and shortly thereafter Dwayne arranged and co-produced a million selling record called From New York to L.A. for Canadian songstress Patsy Gallant. From 1987 to June of 2001, Dwayne was living and performing in southern California. He then moved back to Edmonton, declared Alberta residency, and built a new recording facility with a view toward film scoring and music composition. He is currently writing songs for his next project.
