Related styles: URBAN/R&B: R&B Rap mix, URBAN/R&B: R&B Pop Crossover Details: BIO Born and raised on the south side of Chicago. Im currently residing in Olympia Fields Illinois with my lovely wife and three beautiful kids whom we adore. However, my song writing experience began at 15 while homeless with my mother and younger sister. After exhausting all other options with family and friends, our situation led us to a run down hotel. The hotel room had a T.V slash radio. With the T.V not working and the radio feature working just fine. Needless to say everyday after school and completing my homework, I would sit and listen deeply as to how songs were made. On one particular day something sparked within me. Then I proceeded to write lyrics like never before. I would sing the lyrics over and over again to retain the songs nature, as a matter of fact all my songs are locked inside my brain box as to how they should sound. Im a lyricist to my heart, my words come first then I create the beat and so on and so forth. Usually my studio time consist of being in and out within 2 hours tops per song, which includes doing the track and laying vocals. So much comes at me once I begin to write, I feel totally compelled to jot down every word so that I dont miss any opportunity for various versions of each possible song. I believe thats why Ive amazed so many remix titles. My current 3 song CD release due out January 2009.Consist of my title track Gold Diggers along with Sex Faces and Gold Diggers remix. I was inspired to write Gold Diggers by one of my homies Andre Hooper. He had a homie talking about how he pulled this bad female in the club. Come to find out she had him paying for everything. So my homie said dont you think she pulled you. It was at that moment I said thats a song and I will call it Gold Diggers. But instead of bad mouthing gold diggers, I sort of celebrate them in my song. And to all my (Gold Diggers) out there, ladies get that paper break that jigga.
