Put Jack Kerouac, Tom Waits and Robert Johnson in a musty box car, hand them a bottle of Thunderbird, a pencil and paper, a guitar and rickety piano, come midnight watch the demons and angels de-rail that run-away ghost train. Climb aboard, brother. 6 MP3 Songs SPOKEN WORD: With Music, JAZZ: Free Jazz Details: This cat stands on a collapsing bridge, somewhere between the sacred and the profane. Each song is filled with confessions and truths that would make a gangsta rapper break down and weep, or a streetwalker blush like a nervous school girl in a window steamed backseat of some pimply faced kid's car. It's all been said before, that is, songs about love, hope, disillusionment, redemption, seeking, finding, being lost and sometimes found. Victor takes these tired themes that have been buried and exhumed one to many times, and wakes up their bleached bones with a triple shot espresso and then gives them directions straight to the little home town you keep hidden in the darkest corners of your quivering heart. The musical arrangements to each song create a distinctive backdrop for each story, like a soundtrack for your internal movie. Take a stroll with Victor into the dark streets, the dank river bottoms, stale bars and grim churches, aimless suburbs and vacant fields, all the obscure pieces to the puzzle that make up a lost America. Be forewarned, this genre of music is intended as "UN-"easy" listening.
