Space is part of the fundamental structure of the universe, a set of dimensions in which objects are separated and located, have size and shape, and through which they can move. Space is part of an abstract mathematical conceptual framework (together with time and number) within which we compare and quantify the distance between objects, their sizes, their shapes, and their speeds. Our human bodies have boundaries and occupy space, the same way other objects known only through our named senses do. Though we seldom think of our bodies as physical objects, we know even before reflection that they share some of these properties. Our consciousness inhabits a physical body. Yet our consciousness is not commensurate with our body. The conscious mind is not the servant, nor the master of our body. It is just part of Illusion, of Enigma of Space and Time.
