URBAN/R&B: Soul, POP: 60's Pop Details: In a dramatic scene reminiscent of the life story of many a blues legend, Doa Oxford was born in a parking lot in the back seat of an old Chevrolet. Although the event perhaps falls short of qualifying as the stuff of fable (since it occurred not in the Mississippi Delta, but outside a hospital on New York City's ritzy Upper West Side), Doa's impatience to enter the world was an early indication of the guts, determination, heart and soul with which she imbues her music. After Oxford's father, a trumpet playing Episcopal Priest, died when Doa was only fifteen months old, Doa and her mother, an ex-cabaret singer, moved to Upstate New York. Inspired to play the piano after being given a one-octave toy piano as a gift, Doa began taking lessons at school. Meanwhile, Doa's mother exposed the youngster to many types of music, escorting her daughter to everything from punk rock shows at CBGBs to Tom Jones shows. By age seven Doa was performing publicly and started formal classical training, which she continued until sixteen. Simultaneously, Doa developed a great love for musical theater and began singing and acting extensively in both regional and Off-Broadway plays. This experience led her to explore the styles of legendary jazz and pop vocalists like Ella Fitzgerald, Mel Torme, Dinah Washington and Judy Garland. She also became attracted however, to the primal rock n roll of Chuck Berry and Jerry Lee Lewis. At 17, Doa applied and was accepted to New York University's prestigious Tisch School of the Arts, where she studied drama. While in college, Doa began working as a waitress at the now-defunct Lone Star Caf, a legendary New York City meeting ground of the blues and roots music elite. Soon Oxford was sitting in at open-mic nights. It was at one of those early informal jam sessions that Doa met and became very close friends with Arthur Neilson, a veteran guitarist who has played with everyone from Cyndi Lauper to Otis Rush. The two formed a band called Oxford Blues and began gigging regularly and touring the Northeast, eventually releasing a self-produced CD which garnered reviews from such publications as Living Blues and Keyboard. In addition to leading her own band, Doa continued to sideman and her reputation as a top-notch keyboardist and vocalist continued to grow. Oxford has performed with such legendary performers as Keith Richards, Buddy Guy, Levon Helm, Bob Weir, Hubert Sumlin, Son Seals, Lonnie Brooks, Sam Lay, Jimmy Vivino, Kenny Neal, Shirley Dixon, Shemekia Copeland, Popa Chubby, Bernard Allison, Willie Kent, Jody Williams, Jimmy Johnson, Willie Big Eyes Smith, Creed guitarist Mark Tremonti, and her idol, former Chuck Berry sideman and Father of Rock Roll Piano, Johnnie Johnson! Doa has toured all over the world, bringing her amazing keyboard playing and vocals to devoted fans in Europe, Japan, Canada and the United States. With this many accomplishments, one would think that Doa Oxford must be satisfied. Not so! In addition to playing around the world and indulging her diverse interests (Doa is an accomplished drummer, graphic artist and auto mechanic), she has released Rowena Said, her full-length debut album , RAW her live sophomore release, and Step Up her latest full length album, all nationally distributed under the FountainBleu Records label. Now, calling Los Angeles her home, Doa continues to impress audiences worldwide with her double fisted, high-energy performance. It's all attitude, sultry good looks and a down and dirty beat. An unforgettable musical experience and a show not to miss!! People who are interested in should consider this download.
