Plaintive, sweet vocals meet a folky, efficient writing style. 13 MP3 Songs FOLK: Gentle, COUNTRY: Alt-Country Show all album songs: Velvet Memory Songs Details: I reside with my family in Ithaca, New York. Ithaca has a diverse and inviting music scene, and I'm glad to be part of it. A native of South Carolina, I grew up on instant mac-n-cheese and fried chicken, television sit-coms and Baptist sermons. Musically, I cut my teeth on hymns and classic country. As I grew older I developed an appreciation for just about all types of music. Some of my favorites? Bruce Springsteen, Fats Domino, Collective Soul, Bach, Hank Williams Sr., Enya, Don Henley, Sarah McLachlan, Tom Petty (and Roy Orbison and the Traveling Wilburys, of course!), Ronnie Milsap, the Red Hot Chili Peppers, Doris Dayname the genre and more than likely there's something I like within it. Several years back a friend gave me a guitar. I started learning chords but got bored very quickly. So, when it was time to learn a new chord I wrote a song with that new chord in it to make it stick. I didn't mean to become a songwriter, but thank God I did. I feel a bit self-conscious about tooting my own horn. Thankfully, others have tooted it for me, and here are some of the things they've had to say (regarding the album Velvet Memory): Regina OBrien has won the admiration of many of her fellow musicians with her homespun songs and winsome singing style The Ithaca Journal Like the songs of Neil Young, OBriens tunes are simple, but not simple-minded. Over acoustic guitar and tasteful backing parts, her voice comes through loud and clear on parlor-sized tunes like Epiphany Girl, Once in a While and Double Life. The playing is spare and tasteful; nothing gets in the way of OBriens plaintive, sweet vocals and efficient writing style. The Ithaca Times I would describe my own music as folky and thoughtful. Every now and then my music has some funky chord changes, but so do I. I hope you hear something in my music that speaks to you.
