RI-LI (PC GAME) Ri-li is an arcade game in which you drive a toy wood train engine across many levels. The player has to direct the train to do the right turn for the time, so it does not collide with itself. The train collects cars, which are attached to it automatically. Thus the game is kind of similar to snake games. There are various good and bad items on the track, like those which accelerate the train or make the thread between coaches longer or shorter. At the end of each level, the player is presented with a chapter from the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and asked to choose the number of that chapter of two given numbers. For a correct answer, more points are given. System Requirements: Windows 98, 2000, ME, NT, XP, Vista & 7
