Investigative book exposes the murders and disappearances of hundreds of girls and women in Juarez, Mexico, across the border from El Paso, Texas. Victims were relatively young women from poor families who were kidnapped, raped, mutilated and killed. During the investigation, people are threatened and killed. Journalist Diana Washington Valdez reveals the powerful interests behind the deaths, including drug cartels and corrupt police. Contains exclusive interviews with U.S. and Mexican intelligence and law enforcement officials. A U.S. Congressional delegation had to get involved to pressure the Mexican government to put an end to the horrific crimes that spread throughout that country.
