The Demontagne saga from A Dream Across Time continues. Jamie Demontagne has it all. The family lives in a fairytale compound high above the seacoast of the tropical island of St. Lucia. She has found the love of her life in Andre Demontagne, has three darling children and a flourishing career. But like women who struggle with "having it all" she faces loss as her career, her husband's career and the intensity of her children threaten the future of her marriage. Her two young daughters are beautiful and precocious in different ways. One hides her talents behind her penchant for trouble and bad judgement. The other wrestles with extraordinary paranormal abilities. But, Jamie's son, in particular, is deeply troubled and she fears she will lose him as events from two hundred years ago conspire to destroy his world. The salvation of the boy appears to lie with the adept intervention of a woman steeped in island traditions as well as the talents of her daughters. The final battle for her son is joined at night on an island beach where the women and children come together in a ritual involving the pet boa of her youngest daughter. Only then can they break the hold of forces from the distant past.
