All these are familiar friends; but what are those plants near the kitchen? They are mother's sweet herbs. We have never seen them on the table. They never played leading roles such as those of the cabbage and the potato. They are merely members of the cast which performed the small but important parts in the production of the pleasing tout ensemblesoup, stew, sauce, or saladthe remembrance of which, like that of a well-staged and well-acted drama, lingers in the memory long after the actors are forgotten.
